Fickle Sparrow Spills the Beans About Faeries

It is a well known fact that all faeries absolutely LOVE to read books, look at books, and have books read to them by their guardians, especially. The types of books depend on the Faerie, however, they usually prefer exciting stories, mysteries, learning about extraordinary people and places throughout history, and pretty picture books, or books with silly rhymes.

Faeries love art and watching others color, draw, or paint, craft and create things. They often decorate their own spaces with pretty things they find from their Glen.

Faeries enjoy performing friendly surprises for others and have a "Kindness Code". (find it at www.ficklesparrow.com)

Faeries are extra worried about their guardians if they start showing signs of URO Blight. They encourage their guardians to read about the IFD's Instructions to avoid it.

So far, every faerie FS has encountered (except one, but they think she was just feeling grumpy the day they asked her) said they love for their guardian to create a special space for them. Find out more Faerie Facts at:

FICKLE SPARROW RESCUES FAERIES!

Believers of all things whimsical and the enchantment of Faeries, Fickle Sparrow ventured out, traveling to the faerie realm to find and converse with them. At their first stop of the undisclosed location of the Faerie's capitol glen, Fickle Sparrow met with the International Faerie Delegation (IFD) who asked for their assistance to find homes and guardians for their Faerie friends living in glens across the world. Surprised by this request, Fickle Sparrow inquired into what happened. The IFD mentioned hand held "unidentified rectangular objects" (URO's) that have "multiplied rapidly throughout the lands in a wave of frenzy; only to bring their usual guardians into a stupor-like state or one of distraction and propensity to record themselves."

The IFD further explained, "These URO's and the aimless pursuits caused by them have resulted in a blight upon the enchantment and beauty that once used to cause visitors to look around with their own eyes (and not through the URO's) taking in the wonderment and interacting with the faeries and fellow guardians."

Fickle Sparrow (FS) readily volunteered to rescue any and all faeries that needed rescuing. Upon FS declaring their heartfelt intentions, the IFC honored them with a copy of their sacred map of all the faerie glens and instructions for future guardians on how to avoid, what they termed, "URO Blight". (See FS website for details.) After much preparation and planning, Fickle Sparrow ventured out once again. This time with a mission to rescue forgotten faeries and find them new guardians and homes. After their first rescue journey that "spanned the globe", FS started their Faerie Rescue so guardians can choose a Faerie or Faeries to adopt as their own and stop the spread of URO Blight.
